SALUTE TO LIEUTENANT COLONEL H. D. YOUNG

Colonel Young's extensive experience has been of great value to both the Officer Candidate School and the individual candidates. He entered the service in 1941 and was commissioned 4 July 1942. He was assigned to the Pacific Theater of Operations, where he engaged in several campaigns, one of which was Okinawa, where he landed with the assault troops. Shortly after the successful completion of the operation he was to become one of the youngest battalion commanders in the Army.

Colonel Young transferred to the Air Force in January 1949 and was assigned to Officer Candidate School as Chief of Training. He later served in the capacity of Executive Officer before being named Commandant in June 1951.

We the graduates, of 53-D, render our graduation salute to Lieutenant Colonel H. D. Young. Our heartfelt thanks are extended to him for a job well done here at OCS. We, as a class, convey our wishes for success in all future endeavers.

To the Graduates of Class 1953-D:

I congratulate you on your successful completion of the USAF Officer Candidate School. By your efforts you have now earned the privilege of serving your country as an officer in the United States Air Force.

Your country has need of you. American ideals and the American way of life are under continuing attack. Although the fighting has ceased in Korea, the danger still exists, perhaps even greater than before. Our only hope for peace is in our strength and determination. The opportunity to serve your country in time of need is a precious one. Great demands will be made upon you. You will need courage and character, energy and devotion. I am sure you will prove equal to the tasks and responsibilities which shall be yours.

In serving your country well and faithfully you will find a constant source of personal satisfaction. In doing your duty you will earn the priceless respect of your associates. The more you give, the more you will receive. No law of diminishing returns applies. There is no short measure of devotion to duty.

Though the Air Force is the youngest of the Services, its traditions of duty, honor, and loyalty are as old as the nation we serve.

I wish you well in all your endeavors.

CECIL E. COMBS

Commandant

To the Graduates of Class 1953-D:

Members of the Class 1953-D, I wish to congratulate you on your successful completion of the officer candidate course.

I have reviewed the records of your class and it is with pride that I welcome you all into the Officers' Corps of the United States Air Force. I feel assured that you will faithfully apply the tools and standards this School has taught you. Remember, it is you, those who preceded you, and those who will follow you who will form part of the nucleus of the Officer Corps. If you fail, then the whole corps is affected.

In building your career remember to subjugate your personal gains when it conflicts with what is best for the service and Country. Personal recognition will follow, maybe not tomorrow but eventually. Without a service or country, personal recognition avails you nothing.

Be yourself — be humble.

The task of forming a competent staff and supervising its work was entrusted to OC Lieutenant Williams. The staff was quickly put together and it set to work, facing a twenty-eight day deadline.

OC Captain Barbara Francis was made managing editor and secretary. The chief technical advisor was OC Yaroscak, who doubled in the role as head of the design and art departments. Copy was turned over to the able team of OCs Daly, Rosen, and Foliart, while the photography was handled by OCs Pinson, Stevens, Westly, Nichols and Eklund. Planning the lay-out for the entire book was the work of OC Price, who also assisted in the design and art work.

OC Lieutenant Williams welded them into a well-knit, cooperating team which spent all its spare time racing against the deadline.

The staff of SHAVETAIL is proud of its creation and hopes it will be long-remembered and cherished by members of Class 53-D.

on the way

June 22 and 23, 1953 — it was then that approximately 600 individuals from all commands throughout the Air Force reported to the United States Air Force Officer Candidate School, which is operated by the Air Training Command. Thus the training began that would lead to our commissions as Reserve Officers in the United States Air Force.

the new homestead

Greeted by upperclassmen, we were shown to the barracks which were to be our homes for the ensuing months. All the fears inspired by tales of OCS were partially dispelled as the first classmen helped us move into our rooms, introduced themselves, and made Class 53-D feel at home.

changing identity

Training started in earnest within a few hours, and we found ourselves marching at strict attention, squaring corners and learning memory work. We began by organizing our rooms, setting up displays, having uniforms tailored, and meeting the commissioned staff.

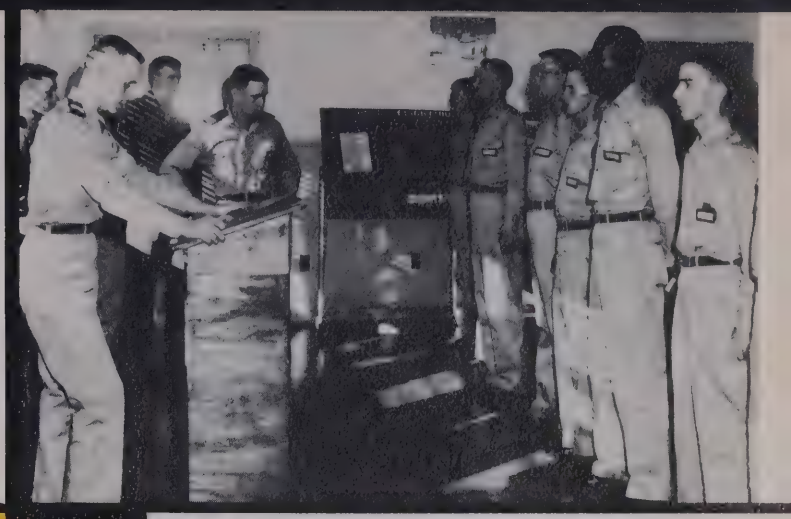
we expect of you!



There was a variety of meetings designed to indoctrinate the new OCs. At one meeting, we sat in profound silence as we were told that only 125 of our class would go on active duty. We quitely left the auditorium and returned to our barracks before realizing the full meaning of the announcement. A number of resignations followed. Training went on, and not one of us who stayed ever regretted it.

In a few short weeks, we became a smooth-running, well-integrated team.

The service is made up of many customs and courtesies designed to develop discipline, to foster esprit de corps, to inspire loyalty and to uphold tradition.

To carry out these objectives, we learned to march at attention at all times while we were second classmen. We reported and asked permission to enter rooms. We learned to be quick and alert — more than we ever imagined we could.

"Yes Sir, No Sir, No Excuse, Sir!" It didn't take us long to find that these were the three answers in OCS.

let's hear "discipline"

By the time second-class days were over, we knew the full value of a minute. We could shave, shine shoes, and press uniforms in ten minutes and still have time for a cigarette before meeting formation.

We learned to salute with snap, precision and pride.

Respect for the flag being uppermost in our minds, each evening one of our squadrons was designated to stand Retreat.

— All these things combined to make us better officers and men.

When outsiders visited us, one of the first things that caught their eye was the neatness of our lawns and the painstaking care of our shrubbery.

Blisters on our hands testified to the fact that we didn't let many blades of grass get out of place.

Every day, after the evening meal, we could be seen in fatigues mowing lawns, pulling weeds, watering shrubs and raking ditches. In addition to the area adjacent to our own barracks, the PT Field, Academic Building, Instructors' Building, and many other places in the OCS area were kept at OCS standards by our laborious efforts.

After a while, we felt sure we could give even the best Garden Club a pointer or two.

We learned the fundamentals of management, Air Force supply, air warfare, military geography, military law, and other subjects designed to give us a general knowledge of Air Force functions.

On the fourth Monday of the academic schedule, and every third Monday thereafter, the classrooms of the Academic Building were filled with ladies and gentlemen, some worried, some expectant, but all tensely waiting to take their tri-weekly examinations. We were to show our instructors and ourselves how we were progressing.

Two questions per minue had to be answered. Only well-versed men, quick of mind and accurate in judgment, could pass these exams — and we did!

exercise

Through the efforts of the commissioned and OC Group Staff, Classes 53-D and 54-A enjoyed a diversified athletic program. It was designed to appeal to the majority and to benefit them as well.

The first part of our Physical Training periods consisted of rigorous calisthenics to tone our bodies for the competitive sports played during the remainder of the period. Each exercise was carefully selected for its over-all value in conditioning. The squat jump, burpee, and sit-up are typical examples.

The competitive sports — softball, volleyball and pushball — served a two-fold purpose. They provided physical exercise and a relief from the mental strain which we were undergoing. The variety of sports gave us all an equal chance to participate to the fullest extent, regardless of our previous experience.

Inspections — rooms were inspected daily, ledges were checked for dust, display drawers checked for alignment and conformity; everything in the room had to be spotless — a place for everything and everything in its place.

Open-rank inspections — uniforms pressed, shoes shined, hair cut and combed, faces freshly scrubbed. Ready for inspection by the squadron and group staff. Be sharp looking at all times — the OCS watchwords.

Saturday arrives, and with it, stand-by inspection; the room is spic and span, as is the rest of the barracks. Each Officer Candidate has on a fresh uniform. The Tac Officer enters, and each room and its occupants are given a thorough inspection.

we pray

In OCS, men of all creeds worship and adore their Maker in their own way. On Sundays, Father Cuddy and Reverend Alley saw an auditorium filled with devout men and women taking time from their training to pray. We, as Officer Candidates, knew, as the great generals of our country know, that a good officer must not only have the attributes of leadership, but must also be a man who prays.

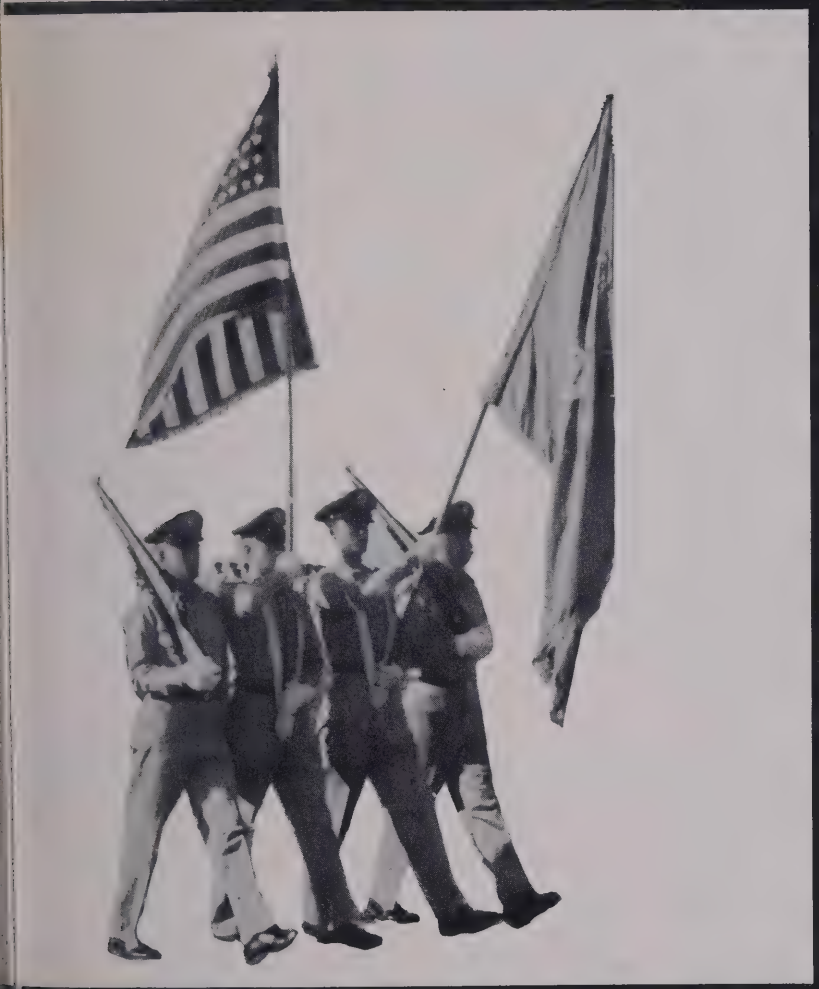
in review



From Valhalla, the warriors of old gaze down upon the Officer Candidate Group passing in review before their commander in the same manner as the Roman Legions paraded before their Caeser. The salute, eyes right, and the formations may be different, but the underlying purpose remains the same — ceremony and loyalty!

It is upon the parade field that many traditions, of the service are preserved, deeply rooted in the pride and esprit de corps of a military ogranization. Frequent parades and ceremonies serve as motivating influences for smart precision in military bearing, coordination in the art of drill, and confidence in practical cooperation among Officer Candidates.

When the cry rings out "Pass in Review," remember that these men performing on the drill field today with such precision and cooperation are the same ones who may be carrying the ball as a well-balanced team in combat tomorrow.

revenge can be so sweet

Black Friday, long-awaited by Class 53-D, arrived on 28 August 1953, and the skies matched the color of the day. We were completely oblivous to the rain, however, for Black Friday meant the end of second-class days.

At 5:15 a. m. we "drove" downstairs to the rooms of the first classmen to pick up our shoulder boards. The reins of leadership were finally in our hands!

We now found ourselves in a unique training situation. All day long, we interrogated, inspected and applied training tactics to the men who had been training us the past two months — Class 53-C.

On this day we learned that the job ahead of us would not be easy. In two weeks, our own second class, Class 54-A, would be reporting. We hoped that we wouldn't have the difficulty in training them that we had with 53-C.

relax

In the few moments of leisure we obtained from a rigid schedule, we found time to relax in genuine comfort.

Those of us who were married and had our families in San Antonio rushed home to spend a few hours with our wives and children. Most of us hadn't realized before how wonderful it was to be home. Others spent those precious week ends in varied activity. The OC Club was filled to capacity on Friday evenings. San Antonio was foreign to many of us, and we excitedly explored the maze of streets, browsed through the shops and stores, hesitated at a newsstand, went to movies and relaxed in air-conditioned hotels. We toured points of historical significance, especially the Alamo, Breckenridge Park and the San Jose Mission.

When given the opportunity, we knew how to relax.

DISMISSED"

The day was December 11, 1953. The ladies and gentlemen of our class sat quietly as the guest speaker praised and congratulated us upon our success. After six months of strict regimentation, close time schedules, pressing studies and close observation by our superiors, the words were quite meaningful.

This was the day!

Most of us sensed a feeling of pride that we had never before known. Over one-quarter of our original class had resigned or been eliminated, but not us! We were the ones who measured up to the high standards set for officers in the Air Force.

For many, graduation day meant the beginning of a new career as a leader in the Air Force. For others, it meant a return to civilian life to continue interrupted careers. But for all, it was a farewell to OCS, to our flightmates and some of the finest friends we ever had.

We thought saying goodbye would be easy, but it wasn't.

OC Lt. Stevens put the OC Drum and Bugle Corps through its paces to obtain results compatible with all OCS standards.

Although a small group, they made up in volume what they lacked in size. Their martial airs sent 53-D passing in review many times, and solemnly sounded Retreat while "Old Glory" was being lowered at the end of the day.

Back Row: Scaggs, Olson, Beane, Peat, Philips, Davis, Theochares, and Brown.

One of the many activities which gives the public a look at OCS is its Glee Club. Composed of many of the finest voices in the OC Group, it has brought much praise to Officer Candidate School.

The members rehearsed long hours under the talented supervision of OC Captain McKay to prepare themselves for their appearances in Dallas, Waco, churches in and around San Antonio, and in the hospital and chapels on the base.

The popularity they have won is well-earned because of their long and earnest work.

Religious services in the OC Area and in the base chapels are assisted by the blended voices of the Protestant Choir. An integral part of the Glee Club, they practiced long hours to fulfill the requirements of both choral groups. OC Lieutenant Ferwerda was the gentleman responsible for their many fine performances.

OC Lt. Newton, D. W.

If you go to Mass on Sunday, or just happen to be passing the Academic Building, you will hear voices singing the praises of God in Latin and English.

The Catholic Choir, under the capable leadership of OC Captain McKay, is a small, well-trained group that sings at Mass and services in the chapels around the base.

honor council

Sitting Honor Council
Phillips, Karrenbrock, Ethun, Francis, G., Born, Baxter.

Integrity of character and a willingness to assume responsibilities are the prime requisites of an officer in the Air Force. Professional and personal ethics must be maintained. The background of this moral code in OCS is based on the Honor Code. The Code is implemented by these gentlemen of the first class who sit in judgment on the rare violations brought to their attention.

As a permanent part of each flight, the Honor Council Representative explains to all OC's what constitutes an honor violation. He points out how a strict honor code will strengthen the integrity of each individual associated with such a code.

Honor Council Representatives
Front Row: Mandeville, Hatfield, Shore, Mathes, O'Brien, G. T.

Second Row: Westly, Matthews, Brown, Jakubowski, Rench.

OC McCormick, R. R.
Character Guidance
Director

If you are too busy to take your gripes to the chaplain, there is a man in each flight who substitutes for the "sky pilot." The Character Guidance representative has the responsibility to see that each man has no personal worries that could harm his standing in the program. It is his duty to see that the new OCs are familiar with the schedules and location of religious services. In short, he is the big brother to all OCs in his flight.

personnel services

Front Row: Salton, Pett, Francis, B., Conaway.
Second Row: Stevens, Bohannon, Stanton, Rose.

OC Major Whitaker, R. C.
Personnel Services Officer

The PSO Representative from each flight faces a hard task. It is one of their duties to see that the OC Club is a place where Officer Candidates can congregate in a wholesome and friendly atmosphere.

All charitable drives such as Red Cross, Community Chest and Blood Donations are handled by this Group.

They are responsible for the arrangements for the graduation lunch, the ordering and distributing of rings and invitations for graduation. The climax of their work is the arranging and functioning of the graduation dance.

information services

Front Row: Pinson, Cohen, Francis, G., Tye.
Second Row: Rosen, Carpenter, Bloomberg, Powers, N., Mills.

OC Major Wester, R. H., Jr.
Information Services
Officer

Press releases, info for the base newspaper and the SHAVETAIL are the responsibilities of ISO. A representative from each flight collects data on the men in his flight and sends in a report to the Information Services Officer, where it is disseminated to the agencies concerned.

Social obligations and Air Force Customs must be well known by the wives of Air Force Officers. The Officer Candidate Wives' Club offers an excellent opportunity for the wives of future second lieutenants to learn these customs and to take an active part in them.

Second Row: Cullen, Raub, Francis, B., Lundy, Greenwade.
Third Row: Fenlon, Georgelis, Kutsche, Mason, Blackett, Elam.

Working in an advisory capacity to OC Major Whitaker, Personnel Services Officer, on matters partaining to the OC Club, was the OC Club Board of Governors. Presided over by OC Georgelis, they monitored all OC suggestions for bettering the Club and took action on all sound criticisms.

They also acted as sergeants-at-arms to see that the high OC standards of conduct were maintained at all times in the Club.

Even on rainy days, the Physical Training Program is carried on here at OCS. Under the supervision of Lieutenant Richarz and OC Major Vella, a self-defense program has been initiated with OCs, O'Brien, Schauer and Gresham as the able instructors.

The curriculum incorporates the basic principles of Judo, Kendall stick fighting and Okinawa boxing. This modern mayhem has proved to be an excellent fill-in for periods not suitable for PT out-of-doors and has established a definite place in the Physical Training agenda for future classes.

Director of Self Defense Program

OC Major Vella, I. A.
Physical Training Officer

One gentleman from each flight is assigned the responsibility of preparing the flight for Physical Training and seeing that they arrive at the PT field at the schedule time, ready for physical conditioning. He and his assistant organize the teams for the various sports and do their best to spur their flight on to victories that count toward the Athletic Award.

ground safety

Front Row: Matthews, Ticknor, Larkins, O'Neil, Grant.
Second Row: McGinley, Kemper, Ogden, Daniel, Stanton.

OC Captain McKay, C. M.
Ground Safety Officer

Cut a finger, sprain an ankle, break a bone, and a report goes to Headquarters, USAF. The man responsible for collecting and forwarding this information is the Ground Safety Officer. Each flight has a Ground Safety representative to maintain Ground Safety Regulations, insuring maximum safety for all OCs.

fire marshalls

Second Row: Moore, L. R., Harris, J. W., Scaggs, Janasiewicz, Robertson.

OC Lt. Newton, D. W.
Fire Marshall

What OC has not been awakened to the cry of FIRE, jumped out of bed, closed the windows, raised the blinds, closed the door, and fled the building. Once outside, he was accounted for, and then slowly filed back into the barracks, realizing this fire drill had deprived him of precious sleep.

Yet, better to lose a few minutes of precious sleep than an even more precious life, and this is the outlook of the fire marshals.

A gentlemen from each flight is a member of this organization. His duty is the protection of lives, barracks and equipment from the dread menace of fire.
